A NEW VOCABULARY
English and Latin,
For the Use of SCHOOLS.

To which is added a Collection of the most common A D J E C T I V E S and V E R B S.

The Eighth Edition.

EDINBURGH,
Printed and Sold by T. and W. RUDDIMANS and the Booksellers there. M. DCC. XLIX.
(Price bound Ten Pence.)

To the READER.

AS the many Imperfections of our common Vocabulary, so generally complained of by Masters and Scholars, and the Unsuitableness for our Purpose of all those done abroad, gave the first Occasion of publishing this Manual; so the favourable Reception that the Seven former Impressions have met with, and the Benefit young Beginners have reaped thereby, did not only encourage, but require this eighth Edition.

It was not to be expected that a Work of this kind should contain a full Enumeration of every thing in Nature and Art, or reckon up all the Particulars which may be ranked under any one Head. It is sufficient for the Design of a Vocabulary, that it furnish the Youth with a competent Collection of the Substantive Nouns that are most obvious to our Minds and Senses, and like to be the Subject of Discourse; and that they be reduced to such a natural Order, as may at once assist the Memory and improve the Understanding. As this was the principal End of the first Composers of it; so they have taken particular Care to use the most proper Terms in both Languages, collected from the most approved Authors upon the several Subjects, as will appear to any who have the Opportunity and Inclination to make a Trial. But because several English Words are not understood by Children, and the Generality of our People, it was judged necessary to join the Scottish Names to such of them as seemed to need Explanation. And in regard there are many Words peculiar to Christianity, with the Names of Fire-Arms, and other things unknown to the old Romans, they were obliged to express them in such Latin Words as are commonly received and used by the best Modern Writers. As also some things proper to our Nation are allowed Place here, cloathed in such a Latin Dress (for want of a better) as can only plead Prescription in our Schools.

But to prevent all Mistakes in this Matter, we have taken Care in this Edition to distinguish such Words as are either not at all, or not in the same peculiar Sense and Signification to be found in true and genuine Roman Authors, by putting a * or Asterism before them.

Throughout the whole, the Gender and Declension are carefully marked. The Gender of the far greater Part is comprehended under the general Rules of Signification and Termination hereto subjoined: And whatever Word is excepted from, or not reducible to these, has a Letter added shewing its Gender. The Declension is discovered by the Genitive Case, which is never omitted when there is any Hazard of Mistake.

As for the Signs of the Quantity, which were marked in two of the former Editions, it was thought thought convenient to omit them in this, both to avoid the laying too great a Burden on the Memory of young ones, who are not capable of attending to many things at once ; and also because the right Pronunciation is more easily learned by Practice and Grammar Rules, and the constant Assistance of a skilful Master.

Tho' Care hath been taken equally to avoid the two Extremes of too great and too small a Number of Words, yet if any shall quarrel the Length of this Work, as being too great a Task for Children, let them consider that it may be made as short as they please, by enjoining such small Portions in any Part of it as they think fit, and passing by what they judge less needful : But 'tis hoped that it may be profitable to all such as desire to speak or understand Latin, not only when they are Children at Schools, but even when they come to Age. And there are many of Opinion, that it may be of good Use to most Persons of both Sexes, who can read or write, were it only to acquaint them with so much of Nature so methodically classed, and teach them to spell so many Words of the English Language, tho' it had not the Addition of the Latin.

To render this Edition the more complete, there is added a Collection of the most usual Adjectives and Verbs digested in the most natural Order could be thought of, with the Abstracts and Adverbs derived from the former, and the Preterites and Supines of the latter ; which may serve

not only to furnish young ones with a considerable Stock of these Words in both Languages, but also very much contribute to the making them more prompt and ready in the Declensions and Conjugations, by having such Portions of them assigned by way of Exercise, as the Discretion of the Master shall think fit.

Some perhaps may wish, that a Collection had been made of the other Parts of Speech, particularly of the Prepositions, Adverbs and Conjunctions; and others also, that the common Conversation among Boys at Schools in English and Latin had been added: But, besides that the first of these come more naturally to be taught them in their Rudiments or Grammar, and the other is fully and excellently done to our Hands in Books written for that Purpose, which are generally taught in all our Schools, such as Corderius, Erasmus, &c. so many things together would either have swelled this Work to too great a Bulk, or rendered it defective in all or most of its Parts, as is observable in such Books where all these are crammed together. Upon these Considerations, it was judged most proper to omit both.

There is no need of giving the Reader any farther Trouble, save only to assure him, that all possible Care hath been taken to have this Vocabulary correctly printed; the Neglect whereof, in our common School-Books is too frequent, and of very bad Consequence in the Instruction of Youth.
